

Delphi Study of Elections: Need Help

ELMAR Contribution by J. Scott Armstrong

July 16, 2004

We are just completing a Delphi Study to predict the 2004 U.S. Presidential Election. The Delphi technique is a method for obtaining independent forecasts from an expert panel over two or more rounds, with summaries of the anonymous forecasts (and perhaps reasons for them) provided to the experts after each round. The findings from this Delphi study will be reported on <http://pollyvote.com>. Does anyone know whether Delphi has been used previously for predicting elections? As far as we can tell, this is the first time.
