

Providing easy access to journal articles

ELMAR Contribution by J. Scott Armstrong

July 10, 2002

I have seen some interesting papers referenced in ELMAR discussions and have planned to get around to reading them. That does not always happen.

It would help if, when summarizing papers in ELMAR (or other such Internet discussions), authors would provide one-click electronic access to the full-text paper rather than simply providing a reference. Almost all publishers that I have contacted (and all commercial publishers) have granted permission to put my papers on my web site, <http://jscottarmstrong.com>, thus allowing easy access. If permission is not granted, you can post the working paper that you used prior to publication (that is, the version that you submitted to the journal), and indicate where it was eventually published.